

Abstract

Proposed are a device and method for controlling a system component of an information system having at least one sensor
5 and at least one processing unit.

A control unit uses information from system components and controls the configuration of the sensors and processing units while the information system is operating.

10

(Figure 1)